Introduction

Located within a 15 minute walk of Newcastle City centre, Buxton House is an imposing building currently occupied by the award winning integrated marketing agency, Martin Tait Redheads.

The building would be suitable for a variety of uses including office, leisure or even redevelopment with large floor plates and excellent accessibility.

Location

The property is located at the busy junction of Buxton Street with Howard Street and Gibson Street, just north of the River Tyne and Quayside.

This part of Newcastle has undergone a significant amount of regeneration over the last decade and a range of new developments have gone up during this period.

New buildings include student accommodation, private housing schemes and housing associations and there are also some other larger projects planned, including the conversion of a nearby office building into a Dakota hotel.

This part of the City offers easy road access from the A167(M) and also into central Newcastle via City Road. Central Station is about a 5 minute cab ride away and Newcastle International Airport is about 25 minutes away.

Buxton House has the benefit of direct street access and allows clients to be picked up and dropped off at the door.
